Executive Summary

The highlight of the quarter was the inaugural offering of the Cemetery Resources Protection Training (CRPT). Course development began with Rachel Wentz in the east central region developing PowerPoint presentations on state burial laws and was rounded out with presentations on cemetery management, filling out the Florida Master site file form for cemeteries, and use of ground penetrating radar and other tools for locating site boundaries. The afternoon portion of the course is given on site at a historic cemetery where we discuss landscape maintenance and have participants clean headstones using D2. The first workshop was held in Palatka this quarter with two more scheduled for the second quarter.

Another highlight was welcoming new archaeologists to the area, including new faculty at Flagler College and the St. Augustine Lighthouse. Dr. William Locascio was hired by Flagler College as their first full time archaeology professor. Staff met with the new faculty numerous times and appreciate the chance to be more integrated into the new Public History program at the College. Another new archaeologist in the region hired by the St. Augustine Lighthouse is Brenda Swann, new Education Director. We look forward to partnering with both professionals throughout the fiscal year.
